Citation by Publication.

IN THE DISTRICT COURT, Mattie Calk of MEDINA COUNTY, 38th JUDICIAL DIST. OF TEXAS, vs. J. C. Calk, THE STATE OF TEXAS.

To the Sheriff or any Constable of Medina County—GREETING:

You Are Hereby Commanded, that by making Publication of this Citation in some newspaper published in the County of Medina, if there be a newspaper published therein, but if not, then in any newspaper published in the 38th judicial district; but if there be no newspaper published in said judicial district, then in a newspaper published in the nearest district to said 38th judicial district, for four weeks previous to the return day hereof, you summon J. C. Calk, whose residence is unknown, to be and appear before the Hon. District Court, at the next regular term thereof, to be holden in the County of Medina at the court house thereof, in Hondo, Texas, on the 8th Monday after the 1st Monday in September, 1912, the same being the 28th day of October, 1912, then and there to answer a Petition filed in said Court on the 2nd day of March, A. D. 1912, in a suit numbered on the docket of said Court No. 1679, wherein Mattie Calk is plaintiff and said J. C. Calk is defendant. The nature of the plaintiff's demand being as follows, to-wit: That she is a bona-fide resident of the State of Texas and has resided in Medina County for at least six months next preceding the filing of this suit, and defendant's residence is unknown. That plaintiff and defendant were legally married on or about the 14th day of March, A. D. 1910, in Devine, Medina County, Texas, and that said marriage relations still exist. That they continued to live together as husband and wife until on or about the 17th day of March, 1910. That plaintiff during the time she lived and cohabited with defendant conducted herself with propriety and at all times treated her husband, the defendant, with kindness and forbearance, but that defendant, disregarding the solemnity of his marriage vow and his obligation to treat plaintiff with kindness and attention, within one day after his marriage to plaintiff commenced a course of unkind, harsh and tyrannical conduct toward her which continued until he left and separated from plaintiff on or about March 17, 1910. That on divers occasions while plaintiff lived with defendant he was guilty of excesses, cruel treatment and outrages toward her of such a nature as to render their living together insupportable. That on or about the 17th day of March, 1910, at their home in Devine, Texas, defendant cursed and abused plaintiff, and, among other things, called her a damned old liar, and drew a gun on her and told her that if she did not pay his debts he would kill her. That the defendant is a man of violent passions and ungovernable temper and that on several occasions during the time plaintiff lived with him defendant addressed to her the most opprobrious epithets and threats of personal violence and repeatedly threatened to take her life. Plaintiff alleges that defendant's actions and conduct toward her are of such a nature as to render their future living together as husband and wife insupportable.

Wherefore, plaintiff prays the Court that defendant be cited, by publication, to appear and answer herein and for judgment dissolving said marriage relations, for costs of suit and for such other and further relief, special and general, in law and equity, that she may be justly entitled to.

HEREIN FAIL NOT, and have you before said Court, on the said first day of the next term thereof, this Writ, with your endorsement thereon, showing how you have executed the same.

Given under my hand and seal of said Court, at office in Hondo, Texas, this, the 4th day of September, A. D. 1912. Issued same day.

[L. S.] AUGUST KEMPF, Clerk District Court, Medina County, Texas.

No Man is Stronger Than His Stomach

A strong man is strong all over. No man can be strong who is suffering from weak stomach with its consequent indigestion, or from some other disease of the stomach and its associated organs, which impairs digestion and nutrition. For when the stomach is weak or diseased there is a loss of the nutrition contained in food, which is the source of all physical strength. When a man "doesn't feel just right," when he doesn't sleep well, has an uncomfortable feeling in the stomach after eating, is languid, nervous, irritable and despondent, he is losing the nutrition needed to make strength.

Such a man should use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It enriches the blood, invigorates the liver, strengthens the kidneys, nourishes the nerves, and so GIVES HEALTH AND STRENGTH TO THE WHOLE BODY.

You can't afford to accept a secret nostrum as a substitute for this non-alcoholic medicine of known composition, not even though the urgent dealer may thereby make a little bigger profit. Ingredients printed on wrapper.

The Men Who Succeed

as heads of large enterprises are men of great energy. Success, today, demands health. To ails is to fail. It's utter folly for a man to endure a weak, run-down, half alive condition when Electric Bitters will put him right on his feet in short order. "Four bottles did me more real good than any other medicine I ever took," writes Chas. B. Allen, Sylvania, Ga. "After years of suffering with rheumatism, liver trouble, stomach disorders, and deranged kidneys, I am again, thanks to Electric Bitters, sound and well." Try them. Only 50 cents at W. H. What we Never Forget according to science, are the things associated with our early home life, such as Bucklen's Arnica Salve, that mother or grandmother used to cure our burns, boils, scalds, sores, skin eruptions, cuts, sprains or bruises. Forty years of cures prove its merit. Unrivaled for piles, corns or cold-sores. Only 25 cents at W. H. Windrow's.

Bad breath, bitter taste, dizziness and a general "no account" feeling is a sure sign of a torpid liver. HERBINE is the medicine needed. It makes the liver active, vitalizes the blood, regulates the bowels and restores a fine feeling of energy and cheerfulness. Price 50c. Sold by W. H. Windrow.

W. A. Smith, Bridgeton, Ind., had kidney trouble for years, and was so crippled with rheumatism he could not dress without help. He started using Foley Kidney Pills, and says: "I began to get better at once, and now all my trouble has left me and I do not feel that I ever had rheumatism. I rest well all night and tho' 59 years old, can now do the work of a man of 35 years. I would like to be the means of others getting benefit from Foley Kidney Pills." Refuse substitutes.—W. H. It's usually the fool who rocks the boat that lives to tell the tale.

Mrs. J. N. Hill, Homer, Ga., has used Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for years, and says she always recommends it to her friends. "It never fails to cure our coughs and colds and prevents croup. We have five children and always give them Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for a cold, and they are all soon well. We would not be without it in our house."—W. H. Windrow.

It's a shame to spill milk, but it isn't a crying shame.

Antoine Deloria, Postmaster at Garden, Mich., knows the exact facts when he speaks of the curative value of Foley Kidney Pills. He says: "From my own experience I recommend Foley Kidney Pills, as a great remedy for kidney trouble. My father was cured of kidney disease and a good many of my neighbors were cured by Foley Kidney Pills."—W. H. Windrow.

THE men owning the lands in the reservoir above the main dam, have a long writeup in The Hondo Anvil Herald of last week, bearing on the litigation between them and the M. V. I. Co., as to possession of their lands. We understand the company has offered them a very good price which they refuse to accept. Their reasons for refusing seems to be largely sentimental; the fact that their homes were inherited from their fathers from Germany. This is hardly a sufficient reason for trying to interfere with a great irrigation project that is turning loose barrels of money in this country, and will continue to be a blessing by the conquering of drought on a little of Texas. They are, perhaps, paying large lawyer fees, and are sure to lose their case. So it seems to us they would decide to sell at the price offered, and use the money received in buying a home on the company's lands near Lytle. —Lytle Herald. The Anvil Herald copied the write-up from the San Antonio Light on its own volition (although we understand since that it is being paid for as advertising in some papers) because we felt that the land holders, who are our friends, had been wronged by the San Antonio Chamber of Commerce's assuming, as the Lytle Herald has done, to judge their case before the evidence is all in and before the courts have had an opportunity to pass upon the points at issue. We will not, at this time, enter into a discussion of these points with our contemporary both for the reason that it is not proper at this time, while the case is pending in court, and for another reason. Suppose we were a millionaire and for any reason wanted to buy the Lytle Herald. Because we had the money and the Herald has it not, should it not be allowed to fix the price at which it would sell but take whatever the millionaire offered it, be the price ever so beggarly? Would this be justice to you or good business on your part? On the contrary, if you owned something that was essential to our success would it not be more in harmony with the eternal fitness of things that we pay you your price and not seek to crush you with our superior strength? We believe the Herald will agree with us. If it does not but contends that it would not be competent to judge of its own small affairs in a matter of this kind and should be made the plaything of a greater power, we

Out of the Rain

By CLARISSA MACKIE

The wind came out of the northwest and howled around the life-saving station at Talem Point. The rain fell in torrents beating like a dozen bass drums on the low roof or swishing against the window panes in rattling volleys of sound. Through the sheets of rain the sea was a gray blur and the sand was wet and sodden, but as the tide crept higher the booming of the surf grew louder and mingled with the noise of wind and rain, almost drowned the voices of the men gathered about the table in the station.

Four of them were playing cribbage, another was reading near the gray window and several others lounged about the room. In the adjoining room was the life boat, trim and ship-shape, ready for instant response to a call of distress. Up and down the beach patrolmen in oilskins were tramping, eyes shaded with dripping hands and ears attuned to sounds of sea disaster.

"Fifteen—two, fifteen—four—and—what's that?" ejaculated Peter Ransom, laying down his cards and turning toward the man by the window.

His companions turned also and all of them stared at a dark winged form beating against the heavy window pane.

"It's a sea gull," said another of the card-players.

"If it is, don't let it in," said Jerome Garret, snapping his cards nervously. "It's bad luck to let a gull into the house."

"I'll go out and drive it away," suggested Henry Horn, pushing back his chair and crossing the room toward the door, but the man in the chair near the window tossed aside his newspaper and arose to his full height.

"Henry Horn," he drawled pleasantly, "this is a life-saving station, isn't it?"

"Yes, of course it is," returned the other impatiently.

"It doesn't say what kind of lives and we take it for granted that it means only humans and maybe pet dogs if they're carried aboard!"

"It's a Sea Gull."

guess maybe if the storm's so bad that a sea gull wants to come in out of the rain—we shall have to overlook your superstitions and let her come in. What—say—yes?—for really—suddenly arising to—tossed good-bye—and—among his companions—tossed—tossed back at him with mingled expressions of amusement, perplexity and doubt.

"You're the captain, Tom," said Henry Horn, smiling. "We've got to do as you say and I hope you'll take your share of the bad luck that follows if you let that bird in here."

"I'll agree to take all the bad luck provided you'll let me have all the good luck that comes in with it," smiled Tom Joslin as he opened the window and admitted a wet flying bird and immediately shut the shutters again. The bird flapped wildly in the gloom of the corner where it had alighted and then lay there, a quivering heap of feathers in a pile of newspapers.

The men gathered around the card table once more and became quiet with certain dark looks toward the corner where the supposed bird of ill omen had fallen, turned his back on the bad luck and picked up his cards. "Where was we?" he demanded.

"It was my count," replied Peter Ransom, sending his cards heavenward. "Well, fifteen—two—fifteen—four—four—four—and the game went on as it had before the interruption, on the accompaniment of drumming rain and howling wind.

Unmolested by his comrades, Tom Joslin went over to the corner and bent above the exhausted bird. Presumably he uttered a slight exclamation and turned to his companions.

"Gee," he said, "this isn't a sea gull—it's a carrier pigeon." He held the bird in his hands and they clustered around him while he lifted a third wing and showed a small aluminum cylinder fastened there.

"Once the carrier something to see," suggested Jerome Garret, relieved that the stranger bird was at last in his hands. "The first needs picking up, then." He turned to the most obdurate member of the group and Henry Horn adopted the suggestion and even prepared some warm milk and bread for the bird.

After awhile, when the bird had recovered itself and would sit snugly in Tom Joslin's hand pecking at the food, Henry Horn once more gathered up his scattered cards.

"Now that all superstition is laid at rest, Capt'n Tom," he said, "I suppose any message contained in that there cylinder belongs to you."

"That's right, it does, Capt'n Tom," voiced the others in chorus and with an appreciative smile Tom removed the tiny roll of parchment from its cylinder and read aloud the message it contained.

"To the finder of this message which is born by Carrier Pigeon, Lovely Lady, sent from Sea Wall, N. J., October 10th—Please communicate with owner and oblige."

"Sea Wall, New Jersey—that's not far from where your sister lives, is it, Capt'n?" inquired Jerome Garret.

"Not more than twenty miles away," returned Tom musingly. "You know I started down there tomorrow on my leave of absence and I believe I'll take the bird back to its owner."

"Maybe you ought to send it out and let it find its own way home," suggested Henry Horn.

"I would do that only it's rather a young bird and I think perhaps this is its first long flight. I'll risk taking it back to Mr. Sprague," said Tom with decision, and so the matter was settled.

The next day dawned clear and crisp with no signs of the heavy storm save the drift-laden sand and wind-tossed stunted trees that had bent still lower before their common enemy.

Tom Joslin started on his journey and when he reached Sea Wall it was an easy matter for him to find the residence of Robert Sprague, owner of the small shipyard.

"Well, I'm mighty glad you brought her back to me, Mr. Joslin," said Mr. Sprague heartily. "Lovely Lady is a young bird and this is her first flight as you have surmised. She is the particular pet of my daughter, Mary, and it was against Mary's wishes that I sent the bird out Tuesday in the face of the threatening gale. To tell the truth, I hardly dared to hope she would go very far. I've taken her to different cities and allowed her to fly home but this is the first message she has carried forth."

Tom Joslin was interested in the companions of Lovely Lady and after Mr. Sprague had shown him all the other carrier pigeons he took him up to his pretty cottage where the life saver had an opportunity of meeting Mary Sprague, fair and sweet and quiet of demeanor. She was delighted at the return of her pet and around the supper table that night Tom Joslin related the story of the storm and how Lovely Lady had tipped for admittance at the window of the station and of the thrill of superstition her tap had caused among the men.

"I hope Lovely Lady hasn't brought you bad luck, Captain Joslin," cried the shipbuilder when Tom had concluded his story.

Tom removed his eyes from Mr. Sprague's lovely face and said slowly and with a depth of feeling that he alone understood:

"If things come out the way I want them to, Mr. Sprague, Lovely Lady will have brought me the best in my life!"

COMEDY IN HEAT OF BATTLE

Instances Where Tragic Scenes Have Been Relieved by Humor or Laughter

Into the tragedy of war are inserted now and then bits of comedy and humor.

During the Zulu war in South Africa an overwhelming force of natives was opposed to a little band of English soldiers. From the Zulu host stepped forth a warrior laden with an ancient bow, which he calmly mounted on a tripod in the open, while the soldiers looked on, admiring his grace, but wondering much what he proposed to do. At last one of the English suggested that their photographs were about to be taken, and by common consent no shots were fired.

Having loaded his piece with great deliberation, the Zulu pointed it, sighted it, and, leaning back upon its handle, he fired. The result knocked him dead over his bow, while a great roar went up from the delighted soldiers. He sat up, looked toward them, and then, the amusement over, he, with his countrymen, charged, and were annihilated by a volley from the steadily aimed pieces of the little band of blue-jackets.

During one of the many battles waged by the New Zealand Maoris against the British soldiers the latter ran out of ammunition. At the moment when death seemed imminent a flag of truce appeared from the enemy's trenches, and messengers came forward with a supply of cartridges to enable the white men to continue fighting.—Harper's Weekly.

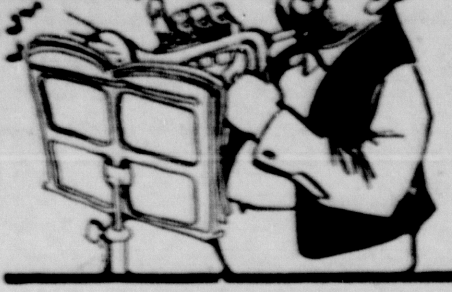

Quaint Facts

Among the pretty customs introduced in a metropolitan household by a visitor is called by her a "secret breakfast table." Says the New York Sun, reaching the table one morning each one of four persons found a tiny unsealed paper cylinder on his or her plate. Unrolled another and another paper was revealed, on which was neatly printed a verse of Scripture. One of them read:

"Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world."

"Well, surely," said the host of the house to the visitor who had arranged the little surprise, "it was a long time, but we will make you feel welcome, even though it should be 'unto the end of the world.'"

IN ANOTHER KEY

Chronological.

The amateur artist was painting—sunset, red, with blue streaks and green dots.

The old rustic, at a respectful distance, was watching.

"Ah," said the artist, looking up suddenly, "perhaps to you, too, nature has opened her sky pictures page? Have you seen the lambent flame of dawn leaping across the livid east; the red-stained, sulphurous islets floating in the lake of fire in the west; the ragged clouds at midnight, black as a raven's wing, blotting out the shuddering moon?"

"No," replied the rustic shortly; "not since I give up drink"—The Sacred Heart Review.

Early Recollections.

It was a real, right down jolly old English wedding, yet down by the bottom of the breakfast table sat one pale and serious individual who, like Sir Arthur Sullivan's organist, was "weary and ill at ease." He seemed miserably alone and unhappy in all that goodly company; wherefore the cheery best man sought him out, slapped him on the back and ultimately said, "Come, come, old man, cheer up. Have you kissed the bride?"

Deep came a sigh from his very boots as he spoke the answer that told far more than his meager words expressed: "Not lately, old man—not lately!"—Sheffield Telegraph.

IN HIS LIFE

"I'm surprised that you should be so interested in watching those silly dudes."

"Force of habit, I guess. I'm president of a real estate improvement company."

"Well, they're a vacant lot."

In Transit.

Men spoke of her as "leading train." But some of those same men believe she's actually lost.

Not Much of a Game.

"I can't bet the life of me under stand why anybody should want to play chess."

"It's a great game—perhaps the greatest intellectual game there is."

"Yes, but it affords no opportunity whatever for breaking speed records."

Appreciation.

"If I were to do it I suppose you would marry a young woman?"

"Thanks."

"Why do you thank me?"

"For complimenting me by supposing that I could get a young woman or have me after the war and hear I've had no suffer."

One Alternative.

"Why do you wish to go on the stage?" inquired the manager.

"I want to get a millionaire husband."

"Well, the stage is overcrowded just now. Be a trained nurse."

Figuring.

"Do you think dissolving your big marriage will add to the expense of your business?"

"Certainly," replied Mr. Dustin Starz.

"The abandonment of accounts will call for a lot of extra bookkeepers."

A Sure Diplomat.

"Johns, were you hearing that little dog bark?"

"Certainly not, pa. I was just going through some maneuvers."

Who could chastise the kid after such a successful answer as that?

One.

Wigginsworth—Well, I see you're back again. (Cries out loud.)

Kingsland (regarding him)—I want up north this time, you mean, chum, to get a wife.

A Critical Employer

Pretty, winsome Harriett Lennox had been clerking at Marston's department store for nearly two months. Already she had lost the pretty color from her cheeks and she found it much harder to sell a waist than she imagined it could be when formerly she had the money to purchase whatever she desired.

"Did that woman buy the waist she was looking at?" questioned Nora.

"No, after I had wasted a quarter of an hour showing her everything in stock she said: 'These waists are beautiful, but I haven't the money, my dear.'"

"That's the way it is with those 'old hens,'" commented Nora. "They seem to have nothing on earth to do but to pester salesladies, and some women think because they have plenty of money it's their privilege to leave their manners at home."

"The very words 'fingerie waists' gives me a pain," admitted Harriett. "I'm weary of trying to make a thirty-six waist fit a woman who takes size forty-four, when we happen to be out of her size."

"No, madam," she said, turning around, "we haven't any blue chiffon waists with ch-ville trimming and gold braid. I'm sure she wouldn't buy one if we had."

"What's the trouble with you? You seem so disheartened," asked Nora sympathetically.

"This is the first position I ever had, but I presume I can stand the customers. I try to please, but the way a girl is treated—use the word 'disgraceful.'"

"You're too naughty," advised Nora. "Be a little more agreeable. If the manager tells you to sell a waist for all you can sell it for that, and don't explain to the would-be customer that it is only near-silk, sewed with near-silk thread, not made in a union shop, and that it is embroidered by machinery and not by hand."

"Possibly I'm wrong, but no difference what I do or say be. Mr. Marston, the proprietor, always finds fault when he goes by this department. Either the boxes aren't straight, or the waists are laid on the table crooked, or I should have made a sale. I went to lunch or came back too late. If my mother wasn't dependent upon me I'd leave this instant."

"Strange, Mr. Marston should be so critical. He is so full of business that he usually leaves the most details to his managers. Chiefly, you'll get used to it twenty years from now, you'll even wonder that you noticed such things as imperfect shoppings and critical employers."

"Twenty years from now, gracious! Don't mention waists in connection with the future to me. I'd like to waste my time that long selling waists marked down from $1 to $1.98, and others marked up from $1.98 to $2.98."

"If you continue to dress in that convent fashion," said the other girl, glancing admiringly at her own over-trimmed gown, "dress your hair in that absurd single style, never put any color on your face when you look ghastly pale, and not make the least effort to please the men—"

"Thank you for your well-meant advice, but the men I'm likely to meet in this business are not the men I came to know socially," commented Harriett, who was interrupted by a young boy who said: "Mr. Marston wishes to see you in his private office immediately."

"Poor thing," said Nora to one of the girls as Harriett, shaking like an aspen leaf, started for the third floor. "She is so refined. I wanted to help her, but I guess she is going to lose her position. Only recently they lost all their money. It breaks her mother's heart that she has to work."

As Harriett entered the spacious office, Mr. Marston arose saying kindly: "Why are you trembling?"

"I'm sorry I didn't suit you," began Harriett, gaining courage.

"But you did. I know all about you. I've watched you since the first day you came. Grasped every opportunity to talk with you without making it awkward. Now I want to ask you how would you like to become the owner of this store?"

"Sir," said Harriett, "how dare you ask me to come to your office to insult me?"

"I'm not insulting you. I'm asking you to marry me. I'm a lonely man, and I want you for my wife. Don't answer me; go home, talk it over with your mother, and all I ask is for you to give me a chance for us to become acquainted."

When Harriett left the office she had promised to "think it over." "Are you going to leave?" asked Nora, when she appeared with her hat and cloak on.

"Yes. Some day you'll know why. If I should tell you today you'd never believe it any way, because I don't hardly believe it myself."

LAUGHS AT MAINE

BOSTON MAYOR SAYS PROHIBITION IN THE MOTHER STATE IS A FARCE.

Men Who Make a Living Out of the Liquor Trade Helping Prohibition.

Old Orchard Beach, Me.—Mayor John F. Fitzgerald, of Boston, who recently visited here, has expressed his views regarding liquor conditions in Maine, and says that the conditions will be improved if the sale is legalized at the coming election.

"This talk about prohibition in Maine is disgusting," said Mayor Fitzgerald. "It is a farce. After the expression of opinion on the part of the people last year, I can not see how the Maine voters can speak so strongly in favor of prohibition. While prohibition prevails, and an attempt is made to keep liquor out of the state, the kitchen barrooms and blind tigers do a rushing business. The stuff they sell burns the lining of a man's stomach. Those it does not kill, it makes crazy. One can see more drunkenness here in a day than he could in one of the European countries in a month. It is easy to understand why some of the people here cry aloud for prohibition. They are the sheriffs, deputy sheriffs and plain clothes men who derive a living for keeping after the liquor sellers or pretending to do so, and some of them who receive money for keeping their eyes shut. The sale of liquor would save all of this, and at the same time boom the state in a great measure."

RETURNS DISGUSTED.

Boston Prohibition Worker Says Maine Is Overrun With Liquor Sellers.

Boston, Mass.—John H. Nicholls, secretary of the Twentieth Century Pledge Signing club, and one of the most prominent prohibitionists in the country, has returned from an eighteen-day automobile tour of investigation through the largest cities and towns of Maine.

Mr. Nicholls was accompanied by several other prohibitionists, who stopped frequently on their route to speak in favor of the retention of the constitutional prohibition amendment. Mr. Nicholls, in speaking of the prohibition situation in Maine, said: "Our investigations proved that there was scarcely a large city or town in the state where liquor could not be obtained by any one who wished to do so. Myself and associates were all sinners, yet in many instances we found it an easy matter to locate places where we could obtain beer and whisky in almost any quantity. It seems almost impossible that such a condition of affairs could exist in this civilized day. The state is fairly honeycombed with licensed barrooms."

SPENT LIFE FIGHTING.

Oldest Anti-Prohibitionist Was Veteran of Two Wars.

McKinney, Tex.—The oldest participant in the recent state-wide prohibition contest in Texas was Thomas Cooper, 99 years of age, of McKinney, Texas.

Mr. Cooper was an ardent anti-prohibitionist. He moved to Texas in 1836 and fought for the freedom of Texas when that state threw off the yoke of Mexican tyranny. In 1861 he joined the confederate army for the same reason, he says, that he now fights prohibition—personal liberty and home rule.

Mr. Cooper says: "The advocates of state-wide prohibition have men and women in Texas from the north. I will be 99 years old the coming September the 22d. My four sons, living in different parts of the state, will all vote against state-wide prohibition. I can not live long, but while I do live let me have what I have always fought for—our liberty and home rule."

CONSUMPTION INCREASES.

Prohibition Laws Fail to Keep Down Sale of Liquors.

Washington, D. C.—In the last twelve months the consumption of liquors broke all records and the people of the United States consumed over $100,000,000 gallons more of whisky and over $13,000,000 gallons of beer in the fiscal year ending June 30, 1911, than they did in the fiscal year ending June 30, 1910, according to the official figures of R. E. Cabell, United States Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

WOMAN GIVES DRINK TO SICK FRIEND GETS HEAVY FINE.

St. Louis, Mo.—The St. Louis Times, dated August 1, 1911, contains the following story: "In Tulsa, Okla., a woman on her bed in sickness and a neighboring woman came to visit her and to minister unto her. The visitor was asked for a stimulant and she brought her a flask of whiskey in her own home, which she had kept for emergencies. She fetched the flask and gave the sick woman a drink."

"A Tulsa judge heard of the incident and summoned the woman, who had given a drink of whiskey, to appear before him. It is against the law in Oklahoma to give away whiskey, even to the extent of one drink, therefore the judge sentenced the offending woman to a hundred days in jail and made her pay a fine of $100."

A RECIPE FOR HAIR DYE

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press.

It was on a certain Monday afternoon that a Mr. Jackson, who was a traveling sewing machine agent, drove into the village of Dover.

Mr. Jackson, being a stranger to the town, had been advised to call on Deacon Weatherby and get the names of people who might be induced to purchase.

Deacon Weatherby owned the saw-mill, the gristmill and the milldam. had a mortgage on the Methodist church edifice and was accounted the big man of the town. He was a man of sixty and a widower, but he had no thoughts of marrying again. The deacon looked venerable. His chin whiskers were twenty inches long, and his hair reached his shoulders. Both were white. Yes, deacon looked venerable, but was a mighty close man on a business deal.

When the sewing machine man came to interview the deacon a happy thought entered his head. If the venerable widower would do him a favor he would return it. He had a recipe for hair dye said to be after an Egyptian formula. He had never made personal use of the dye, being a red headed man and loving the color, but he had every reason to believe that it was a world beater. It restored the hair to the color it was when the grower was only twenty years old. It rendered it soft and glossy. It defied detection. By the use of this dye a man or woman of sixty could claim to be only forty and no one would call either a liar. The deacon after getting that long hair and those venerable whiskers colored needn't give his age. The people would guess it at forty-one and add that he had not reached his prime yet.

Two days later beheld a gay old boy, hair and whiskers a glossy black! There were about ten other old men in the place with whiskers more or less venerable, and one after another as they met the deacon they contemptuously exclaimed:

"Hub! Got your old hair and whiskers dyed, eh?"

For a week or so Deacon Weatherby was made fun of and called an old fool. Then the other old men dropped in one after another and paid him a dollar in cash for that recipe. Some tried to beat him down to 75 cents, but it was no use. It was either come down with a dollar or keep the same old color of hair and whiskers. Then a sort of rush set in. Every woman in town who had five gray hairs in her head wanted a bottle of that dye. There were grandmas who cried for it. There were men and women with hair of doubtful color, and there was the usual proportion of redheads who sighed for a change. Thus Deacon Weatherby was kept busy writing off copies and taking dollar bills.

The Methodist minister was a man of fifty, with gray side whiskers. He had no vanity about him. It hurt his feelings to stand in his pulpit and look around him on so much hair dye, and one day he called on Deacon Weatherby for the purpose of protesting. He did protest. He said it was a bit of vanity that must result in harm.

"Well, I dunno," replied the deacon. "I can't say that I feel any more skittish than I did before I used the dye."

"But why change the color?"

"There ain't no use in lookin' as old as the hills."

"Then it's deception, and deception is an offense."

"It's only kinder that way, parson," said the deacon, as he hitched around in his chair. "I wouldn't lie about my age if you was to ask the fingers, but I don't keer to have folks think I was waitin' around here when Columbus arrived. I was lookin' at your whiskers all through meetin' last Sunday."

"You were?" What's wrong with my whiskers?"

"I know you to be about fifty years old, but them whiskers make you look sixty-five."

"You don't say?"

"Fact, parson. When meeting was out I heard old Mrs. Parsloe saying to her husband that we needed a younger man in the pulpit, all on account of them gray whiskers, you see. If they was black you'd look to be thirty-five or thirty-eight."

"Hum! You think so, do you?"

"Sartin sure. I'll let you have a pin of it free of cost if you'll use it."

"I see the point now, though it was obscure at first. I think I will at least take it home."

And the next Sunday—behold! From the pulpit to the doors of that church there wasn't a gray hair or whisker. Hair dye had captured the town. Look where you would there was a shine and a glister.

But we can't always keep a good thing after we get it. It came the date of the annual church picnic. It was held on the banks of a lake, with the nearest shelter two miles away. All but a scant dozen of the villagers turned out. It promised to be a fine day; but, alas, a soaking old rain came on and wet everybody to the skin. It did sure. It wet up the hair dye, and the dye poured with the rain. It ran from heads and from whiskers, and it blackened faces and clothing and produced frumps and frights, and a week later venerable whiskers and gray heads were to be seen again, and there has been no experimenting since. Deacon Weatherby has the recipe laid away, but it will never be called for again.

For singles—trap or field—just toss in a shell, press the button and—"PULL." The side bolt makes it easy. You don't have to tug at the barrel or watch an on-and-off device. The action stays open after each single shot is fired.—It always stays open when the magazine is empty. Five shots—three to get the cripples—each under absolute control of the trigger finger. The recoil loads for you—kicks another shell in; takes the strain off the gun—the discomfort out of the kick—all without diminishing the drive behind the shot.

Simple take-down—a few turns of the readily handled magazine screw-cap makes cleaning, carrying and interchange of barrels quick and easy.

BETTER MEDICINE

THAN CALOMEL

Dodson's Liver-Tone, a Safe Vegetable Liquid, Now Takes the Place of Calomel, the Powerful Mineral Drug

Many people know the danger of calomel, yet they take it because they know of nothing better. Other people are not afraid of calomel because they do not understand what a dangerous drug it is.

Nobody needs to take dangerous calomel (which is made from mercury) if they live near a store where Dodson's Liver-Tone is sold.

W. H. Windrow sells Dodson's Liver-Tone, and guarantees it to be a perfect substitute for calomel. It is a pleasant tasting vegetable tonic, that lives up the liver without causing any restriction of habit or diet. It has none of the bad after-effects of calomel and is safe for children as well as grown-ups.

Mr. Bader took his prisoner and his mount to San Antonio Sunday and turned them over to the Bexar County authorities. The horse was a condemned government horse and had been stolen from a Mr. Campbell of San Antonio.
